

"I have never encountered such a well-travelled group in my life, there was a man making dinner reservations at the South Pole on his satellite phone for the following week in Napa Valley, California." Steven Schaefer recalls.

One of the world's most adaptive species... and Emperor penguins

"It was a lifelong dream to visit the polar continent and why not take a group photo with the penguins that everyone asks, if it is a montage. Actually I brought the tuxedo along carefully folded and putting it on in sub-zero temperatures was only the first part of the attempt. Then I had to move slowly on my knees to be accepted by the penguins as one of their own."
